

5 AI Prompts Every Mom Should Try

Copy. Paste. Get some time back. — from Kim at Moms AI Club

How to use this: open Claude (claude.ai) or ChatGPT, paste a prompt, and fill in anything in [brackets]. Then keep talking — say "shorter," "give me more options," or "that won't work because..." until it's right. That's the whole skill.

1. The Icebreaker

Perfect if you've never used AI before.

Hi! I'm a mom and I've never used AI before. Ask me 3 quick questions about my life, then tell me 5 ways you could actually help me this week.

2. Dinner, Solved

Works with whatever's actually in your fridge.

Here's what I have: [list your fridge and pantry — rough is fine]. Give me 3 dinner ideas I can make in under 30 minutes using mostly this.

3. The Boredom Buster

For the fourth "I'm bored" before lunch.

My kids are [ages] and they're "bored." Give me 5 things they can do this afternoon with stuff we already have. No big mess, no store run.

4. The Brain Dump

Get the mental load out of your head.

I'm going to dump everything on my mind. Don't fix anything yet — just listen. When I'm done, sort it into: To-Do This Week, Can Wait, Needs a Decision, and Just Worries.

5. The Kid-Question Lifeline

For 'why is the sky blue?' round four.

My [age]-year-old keeps asking: [question]. Give me an answer they'll actually understand, plus one fun follow-up fact they'll love.

Want a new lesson like this every Monday — with prompts, printables, and zero jargon?
momsaiclub.org · Founding memberships $9/month